The Earliest Appearance of Idaho Territory--Including The Future Montana & Wyoming Territories

Third in series of Johnson maps showing evolution of the mapping of these western territories.

The most notable feature of the map is the massive Idaho Territory, which incorporates all of the future Wyoming and Montana Territories. Formed in March 1863, Idaho Territory remained in this configuration until May of 1864, when Montana Territory was created, making this configuration a rare and short lived occurrence.

Shows towns, railroads, explorer's routes, mountains, rivers, etc.
