Description:

A decorative map with Ireland and Scotland side by side, colored by counties. Includes a decorative border. Nice detail in both maps, including early roads, towns, railroads, rivers, lakes, islands, etc. Inset of the Shetland Islands.

Mitchell makes an interesting choice in portraying the two countries together. Perhaps he chose to do so as these two countries are linked in Celtic heritage as well as producing a lot of American immigrants. Alternatively, this could be the representation of the two subservient, non-Anglo-Saxon European components to the United Kingdom.
