Description:

Decorative map of the Rotherhithe and Bermondsey sections of what is now greater London.

Fine example of this map of a portion of London, from John Strype's re-issue of John Stow's Survey of London, originally, was published in 1598. Strype expanded upon to Stow's original account with information about customs, institutions, monuments, charities, events like the Great Fire of London, the guilds and wards as well as detailed descriptions of the parish churches. He even included original material material that was excluded by Stow himself.

Includes a list of 34 streets and a scale of miles.
