Description:

Very scarce miniature engraved chart of the port of Antibes, in the south of France.

This is possibly the first English printed chart of the famous port of Antibes, now sometimes known as Port Vauban, one of the great private yacht in the south of France.

The chart is very focused on the port proper, with details of the surrounding fortifications (which would have been particularly relevant to British sailors during the Napoleonic Wars, when the map was published.)

Specific maps of Antibes are extremely rare.

Detailed Condition:

Toning at the bottom edge. Binding marks in the left neatline. Trimmed to neatline at the bottom edge.
