This is a detailed navigational chart of the coast of Oregon, from covering the central part of the Oregon Coast, from Cape Blanco to Yaquina Bay, published by the British Admiralty.

The present example is corrected to 1930, with hand drawn corrections up to 1934 in red ink.

The chart shows many minor coastal and riverine towns are labeled. The map was designed to be a working navigational chart, and as such includes a vast amount of detail along the coast. Away from rivers, only railroads and major mountains are named inland.

The map shows soundings, reefs, currents, buoys, lighthouses, bottom sediment, and many other details of use to the navigator. Additional notes further interest to the chart. A note in Grays Harbor notes the seasonal changes of bar depths, an intriguing sedimentological observation. Further notes describe lighthouses that have been destroyed or passages that should not be used for various reasons. A note in the upper right measures the tides at various localities.

As with all British Admiralty charts, this map provides a wealth of information while preserving a simple and attractive design. It focuses on a particularly desirable area, showing the coastal Pacific Northwest in its entirety.
