Very rare late state of Bradford's map of the Republic of Texas, the first printed map of the Republic.

Bradford shows the location of a number of the early counties, Indian Tribes, early roads, and towns.

An essential map for Texas collectors, a very rare state of the first reasonably obtainable separate map of the Republic of Texas.

State Differences

The circa 1843 state of the horizontal Bradford Texas includes the following changes:

- Counties are shown, instead of the previously used colonies and grants.
- Texan territory is extended south the Nueces, off of the southern edge of the map.
- Houston is added.
- Austin is added.
- The city of Galveston is now labeled as such, and "Galveston I. and County" is so-labeled.
- Other changes have been made.

Detailed Condition:

Restorations in the margins at the lower right and left sides of the map.
