Setting The Border Between Victoria and South Australia

Rare Australian Colonial Survey map, showing Charles Tyer's survey work on the Victoria and South Australia border.

The map was printed by Hansard firm, longtime official printers of Parliament.

In 1839, Charles Tyers was directed by Governor George Gipp to establish a boundary between Port Phillip and South Australia. Arriving in Melbourne on October 1, 1839, Tyers established a surveying party, which included Thomas Townsend as assistant surveyor.
