Description:

One of Three Known Surviving Examples

Rare Hendrik van Schoel edition of this early map of Bavaria (and Baden-Württemberg), first published by Paolo Forlani in 1570.

The map is centered on the Danube River, extending south to Lake Constance and the Alpine regions of Germany and north to the Main River, west to the Rhine. Major Cities include Stuttgart, Munich and Nuremberg.

Four years after Forlani's map of 1566, Forlani created this second map of Bavaria, based upon Sebastian Munster's Swabia and Bavaria XI. Nova tabula. Bifolco credits the work to the publisher Claudio Duchetti, during his short Venetian period. The plate was then brought to Rome by Duchetti, where it was later acquired by Giovanni Orlandi in 1602, and then sold by him to Hendrik van Schoel.
