Description:

Beautiful mid-17th century engraved map of the Volga River in Russia, split across three consecutive sections with the smaller of the three showing the city of Astrachan. The map was published by Joan Blaeu in Amsterdam in 1667. It was later reissued by Covens & Mortier.

The map traces the course of the Volga until it drains into the Caspian Sea. The cartouches bring considerable decorative appeal to the map.

As the map was primarily seen in Blaeu's Atlas Maior, it is somewhat scarce on the market.

Detailed Condition:

Beautiful original hand-color heightened with gold.
