Description:

Intriguing genealogical tree, made during the last century of uninterrupted royal rule of France. The genealogy of the pre-Bourbon French dynasties is traced back for several dozen generations to a series of kings who supposedly lived in the second century. Many extinct lines of the family are shown, including the kings of Paris, the Kings of Aquitaine, and the "Western Emperors."

The work is further illustrated with many coats of arms at the top of the map. Four decorative prints in the bottom show some of the major Parisian residences of the kings of France. Three views of the Louvre are shown, including the gardens and the interior. An additional view shows the royal palace in the Bois de Vincennes, now in the 12th Arrondissement.

This map appeared in Chatelains Atlas Historique, one of the most extensive Dutch encyclopedias of the time.
