Interesting separately issued transportation map of Iran, published in Tehran by A Sahab, one of the leading Iranian cartographic publishers.

The map provides a fine overview of different types of roads, borders, air routes and sea routes, pipelines and archeological sites. An elaborate distance table appears in the lower left, showing the distances between just under 100 Iranian cities and town.

The map was made soon after the 1953 Iranian coup d'état, when the prime minister Mohammad Mosaddegh was overthrown by an Anglo-American covert operation that marked the first time the US had overthrown a foreign government during the Cold War.
