Description:

Original antique map of St. Christopher's Island in the Caribbean, now known as Saint Kitts. The piece includes an inset map of the island of Nevis, which appears significantly less populated than St. Christopher's.

Numerous streams, high points, buildings, paths, forts, and more are shown throughout the island. At the time of the making of this map, the islands belonged to the British Empire, and their most famous offspring, Alexander Hamilton, was in charge of the U.S. Treasury.

Detailed Condition:

Minor offsetting. Upper left margin trimmed to neatline.
