Description:

Attractive presentation, dissected as a separate folding map, of Edward Stanford's two-sheet London Atlas map of India (including present-day Pakistan, Bangladesh, and Burma), and Sri Lanka.

The map provides detailed information about the political boundaries within the Subcontinent right around 1900, and shows a number of undersea communication cables, which proliferated at the end of the 19th and beginning of the 20th centuries.

Detailed Condition:

Original hand-color. Dissected and mounted on original linen.
