Description:

Attractive original antique views of four important forts and buildings on Ambon Island from Francois Valentijn's Oud en Nieuw Oost-Indien. Ambon is located in the southernmost Spice Islands.

The first fort shown is Fort Amsterdam, built in Hila. Built on the site of a trade lodge established in 1512, this would be occupied by the Dutch in 1605. Adjacent to the view of this fort is the local temple. Below this, the fort of Rotterdam and the town of Middelburg are shown.

Ambon Island, part of the Maluku Islands in central Indonesia, is located on the Banda Sea. During the colonial period, the island was originally colonized by the Portuguese, prior to the Dutch takeover of the island in 1605. The 1623 "Ambon Massacre" of English settlers who briefly captured the island remained a thorn in the side of Dutch-British relations for many years. Subsequently, the British captured and returned the island several times.

For the text, Valentijn borrowed heavily from contemporary works. To create such detailed maps and descriptions, Valentijn most likely also had access to the VOC's archives. These archives were closely watched and very few scholars or officials gained entry, particularly if they were likely to publish the contents of the repository. Indeed, Valentijn was lucky to see his work published at all.

Today, Valentijn's work is regarded as a veritable encyclopedia on maritime Asia. It is considered a useful collection of sources, from the eighteenth century and earlier, drawn from the VOC and personal papers. Some of his maps, particularly those of Australia, are drawn from manuscript sources now lost, making his history the lone surviving record of endangered knowledge.
