Description:

Beautiful large-format mapping of England and Wales, prepared by Jacques Nicolas Bellin for the Depot de la Marine in the 1750s.

The map covers England and Wales, and parts of Scotland and Ireland. The English Channel is an important feature of the map, as the map was primarily for the use of French Naval navigators during a period in which Britain and France were constantly at war.

The title declares that this is a map of the British Isles in five sheets, however, these two sheets join well together but not well with the other three. It is unusual to find a matching pair of these sheets.
