Description:

Early Naming of "El Katr".

Extremely detailed late-19th century mapping of Persia, Afghanistan, Beluchistan, and the Persian Gulf, published by Edward Stanford.

The map focuses on the topography, cities, roads, and other features of this geopolitically vital area. The title credits George Curzon, one of the most important British statesmen of the late-19th and early-20th centuries, as the supervisor of the production of the map. With William James Turner, Fellow of the Royal Geographical Society, as the mapmaker.

The United Arab Emirates is called the "Pirate Coast", with Abu Dhabi, "Debai", "Sharkah", and several other cities named.

Qatar is called "El Katr", an early use of this name, with El Bidaa, Ras Laffan, Ras Rekkan, and Zabara named.

"Koweit" is named and located.
