Description:

A good example of Honter's double cordiform map of the World.

Honter's map is based on Apian's cordiform map. He retains Apianus' use of the term America and retains most of Apian's geographical information except for the treatment of the north coast of Asia, where Honter diverts the coast to run to the North Pole.

The map was engraved by Heinrich Vogtherr the Elder, whose initials appear on the lower left section of the map. The map was reissued periodically in a number of other works later in the Century and was certainly one of the more recognizable maps of the World, prior to Ortelius' map.

Detailed Condition:

A good example, with the usual evidence of binding holes at the centerfold and a bit of breaking, but in all a nice fresh example.
