Detailed map of the island of Madagascar, from one of the most important compilations of voyages published in the mid-18th century.

The map is highly detailed, showing relief pictorially and numerous rivers, settlements, coastal features, and more. A note in the lower right of the map states that the southeast of the island, presumably the most mapped part, contains too much detail to be shown on the present map.

Detailed Condition:

Tab tear in lower left margin. Tape staining in lower left of image and upper left of the margin.
