Description:

Original Pen and Ink Cartoons on Artist's Board

Fantastic vintage cartoon praising the warm weather and lack of snow in coastal California. This is a great example of a work by the famed early 20th-century Californian cartoonist Frank Kettlewell, who was working at the time for the Oakland Tribune.

The cartoon shows an "Old-Man Snow Man" sledding down from the Sierra Nevada Mountains, through a snow-covered Central Valley. When he reaches the Coast Range and the Berkeley hills, he derails, leaving joyous residents cheering and the city free of snow. Sacramento and Mount Hamilton (with its telescope) are shown covered in white.

A humorous cartoon by an important early California satirist.
