Description:

Nice impression of Schenk's view on cities in the Netherlands, Belgium, and Luxembourg, published in Amsterdam around the year 1700. This map focuses on the defenses of buildings in an area where the majority of the War of the Spanish Succession would be fought.

Cities shown include Antwerp, Luxembourg, Brussels, Maastricht, and Dunkirk. Each includes a description in Latin and Dutch describing the history of 16th-century conquests up until 1702.

The War of the Spanish Succession, which started in 1701, would be fought in these areas and they would become part of the Austrian Empire, having primarily been Spanish beforehand.
