Description:

Fine original antique map of Northern Italy, showing the region from Turin to Parma and centered on Milan. This fine map was published by Frederick De Wit in Amsterdam at the end of the seventeenth century, at a time when much of the region was controlled by the Hapsburgs.

The map extends to the Genoese coastline, showing Savonola and Rapallo. In the northwest, the Alps are shown. The finger lakes of northern Italy are attractively portrayed. A decorative and attractive cartouche appears in the upper right, showing cherubs as well as the coats of arms of Milan, Parma, and Montferrata.

Detailed Condition:

Backed with wove paper. Minor soiling and toning, especially at the bottom edge near the centerfold. Some minor wear along centerfold. Side margins trimmed to neatline.
