Description:

Colorful advertisement pictorial map of Lexington, Kentucky, produced by Chuck Jones of the Emerald Printing Company in the late 20th century.

The map includes a descriptive roll of text describing the city's history, starting in 1779 with the construction undertaken by Robert Patterson. It describes the highlights of the town, noting it as the hometown of Mary Lincoln and Henry Clay, as well as its famous horse industry.

Throughout the map, numerous buildings of historical Lexington are shown. Many advertisements are spread throughout, for businesses as disparate as restaurants, real estate auctioneers, and brick suppliers.
