Description:

Attractive original woodblock print of the city of Lüneburg in the German state of Lower Saxony. Part of the Hanseatic League, Lüneburg has long been a center of North and Baltic Sea trade. At the time of this publication, Lüneburg was entering a period of strife due to the decline of the Hanseatic League and the scarcity of Baltic herring.

The map is attractively designed, with many spires and more rising above the city. Twenty-three places of interest are denoted. The genealogy of the rulers of the city is shown below the view.

Detailed Condition:

Minor centerfold toning.
