Description:

Public Works Administration -- Stimulating Business and Employment

Lively pictorial map of the United States, published by the Public Works Administration.

The map provides a pictorial look at how the "PWA releases vital regenerative forces in private industry in every State through the construction of useful public works of enduring social value . . . For every two hours of work at the building sites, five hours of work are generated in private industry . . . "

Centered around a large townview in the middle of the map, major industries in most of the 50 United States are shown.

Statistical and informational text on the verso.
