Description:

Remarkable large format map of Alabama, Mississippi, and Louisiana, from Anthony Finley's New American Atlas.

The map presents an excellent look at the three states shortly after their admission into the Union. The northern part of each state is dominated by oversized early counties and regions which were still in the hands of various Indian tribes, including the Cherokee and Upper Creek in Alabama and the Choctaw and Chickasaw in Mississippi. General Jackson's Road is shown, as are the Robinson Road and the Old Natchez Road in Mississippi. A number of early Indian agencies are shown along the various northern roads.

A fabulous example of this scarce map.

Detailed Condition:

Original hand-color by county. Very minor soiling and some offsetting, overall a very nice example.
