Description:

A meticulously detailed map of the Kingdom of England and the Principality of Wales by Frederick de Wit, published in Amsterdam circa 1680, distinctly divided into their respective provinces and created with the privilege of the powerful Lords of the States of Holland and West Friesland.

The cartouche features the coat of arms of England.

While the map's title claims to be highly accurate, it is essential to consider the element of salesmanship in such a statement, as is common with cartographic works of this era. Nevertheless, the map showcases the intricate network of rivers, cities, towns, and other geographical features characteristic of England and Wales at the time. With its detailed depiction of the provinces and carefully labeled locations, the map serves as a valuable resource for understanding the historical geography of the region during the 17th century.
