Description:

Rare bird's-eye view of Boston Harbor, providing a fine look at the many islands of Massachusetts Bay. This view was lithographed by George Walker and company in Boston in the earliest 1900s.

The covers advertise Walker & Co's other maps, including street maps of Massachusetts towns.

This view belongs to a popular kind of bird's-eye view map that flourished from about 1900-1915.
