Description:

An intriguing group image of Native American people with white men and women settlers posing in an unidentified outdoor frontier location, possibly Indian Territory. Five Native American men are seated in a row along the exterior of a board and batten meeting house, and at least two of the remaining figures appear to be Native Americans. Several white men and women and their children complete the unusual outdoor scene.

Detailed Condition:

Albumen photograph, on card mount. Image exhibits some moderate spotting, but overall condition is quite good.
