Description:

Scarce chart of the planned Apollo 14 lunar traverses, part of a series of charts used by the astronauts to plan their visit to the Fra Mauro formation. The map shows the two planned routes for each of the two possible landing sites for the mission. The map was produced by the Mapping Sciences Branch of NASA in Houston, shortly before the 1970 mission.

The map is a plotted overview of the EVA routes overlaid onto a stripped-together areal image of the region. The plotted paths include various marked points, which are referred to by detailed inventory at the bottom of the map. Major features of the moon's surface are denoted.
