Description:

Rand McNally's double-page large map of Georgia and its railroads, published in Chicago at the end of the 19th century. The map shows outdated county divisions, railroads, cities, waterways, canals, and much more.

Swamps are shown to the south of the map, with the southern end of the Appalachian mountains visible at the top. Atlanta connects most of the major railroads. The map includes a listing of all the railroads that operate in the state.

Detailed Condition:

Minor centerfold toning.
