Description:

Fine east-oriented map of the Kingdom of Naples from Ortelius' Theatrum Orbis Terrarum, the first modern world atlas, showing the area from the Tronto and Amaseno Rivers and south to the Ionian Sea.

At the time, Naples was ruled by the Crown of Aragon and Ortelius mentions Charles V in the text on the verso as having recently strengthened the capital city's fortifications ("Urbs spacium amplectitur magnum, inter mare, amoenissimosque colles aedificata magnifice, moenibus firmissimis, praesertim haud pridem iuffu Caroli. V. Imp. consepta, munitaque").

Modern regions, such as Calabria, Apulia, Campania, and Latium, are noted, as well as the ancient ones of Picenum, Messapia, and the Marrucini.

The map is based on Pirro Ligorio's map of the region.

Detailed Condition:

Marginal soiling. 1598F text setting on verso.
