Original vintage poster promoting Western Airlines routes in the United States and Mexico; an attractive example of graphic design.

The poster shows the sun over western mountains with routes to Phoenix, Palm Springs, Carefree, Acapulco, San Diego, and Mexico City, each with a featured hotel from the Western International Hotels (now Westin) brand. The hotel group was acquired by United Airlines' holding company in 1970. The Hotel Alameda (Avenida Juarez, 50) in Mexico City was destroyed following the 1985 earthquake. The former Lloyd Wright-designed Oasis Hotel (155 S Belardo St.) is listed for Palm Springs.
