Description:

Early trekking map of central Nepal, focused on the region just to the northwest of Nepal, along the Trisuli River.

The map shows the region in extremely fine detail, with contours, rivers, roads, towns, and more shown. This map was produced locally, in Kathmandu, for the trekkers that started to arrive in the region to explore its natural beauty in the late 20th century.

The map includes a translation guide to Nepali, facilitating basic communication between trekkers and the local people.

Provenance

This map was used by the botanist Oleg Polunin on his travels to the region. Educated at Magdalen, Oxford, and having taught at Charterhouse, he wrote several important texts for students of botany. His early work focused on European flowers, but later he started studying wild flowers in the Himalaya. He was awarded the Linnean Society's H. H. Bloomer Award in 1983, shortly after the publication of this map. He died in 1985.

Detailed Condition:

Cyanotype map. Stamp reading "Oleg Polunin 2 Lockwood Court Knoll Rd. Godalming." Strong fold toning. Scant loss at folds.
