Description:

Fine Pair of Regency/Victorian Table Globes with Matching Furniture.

A nice set of celestial and terrestrial globes from the early 19th century, displaying the finest London craftsmanship of the time.

The terrestrial globe, published by John Smith in 1825, preserves a marvelous depiction of the world at the time. The seas are colored a faint blue-green, with a darker shading to the coastline. Detail in the United States is nice, and it is shown extending to the Pacific coastline. New California is named, while Texas is shown as "Potosi." The routes of important navigators are demarcated.

The celestial globe claims to show over 3500 stars. Constellations are drawn following the study by Gilpin. This globe was published by John Cary in 1816.

Detailed Condition:

Pair of 12-inch terrestrial and celestial table globes with matching stands. Original hand-color. Minor abrasions and rubbing to the terrestrial globe, not strongly affecting the image. Some significant areas of
