Description:

Electors Map of New South Wales

Finely detailed map of New South Wales, published by the postal department, with details of Electors and Electoral Districts overprinted in red.

The original map is focused on roads and postal routes, which are colored in yellow and blue and includes inset maps of the area 20 miles around Sydney and the area around Newcastle.

The present map is overprinted in red, identifying the names of the different Electoral Districts and the number of Electors in each district. This was the first of several similarly titled maps issued between 1871 and 1900, all of which are different sizes and printing matrixes.
