Description:

Interesting original 18th-century engraving showing the backside of a first-rate ship and of the royal galley.

The ships are finely represented and contain a number of flourishes in their design. The back of the firstrate ship, in particular, contains a large number of decorations sculpted out of wood. The royal galley is slightly smaller, but also well-decorated and with a large cover.

The engraving appeared in Diderot's monumental Encyclopedie. The engraving is based on an earlier depiction by Nicholas Bellin, the primary cartographer for the French Navy.
