Description:

The Republic of Texas in 1838

Nice example of this early edition of Bradford's large map of the Republic of Texas, first published in 1838.

In 1835, Bradford issued a small map of the Texas shortly before it became a Republic. In 1838, Bradford issued his Illustrated Atlas, a much larger and more lavish production, which included the present map. It includes all of the empresario land grants and colonies, as well as the early county configurations. The map is updated to include many of the new towns and place names in the growing Republic, as well as many early roads and other features.

The first maps of the Republic of Texas were created in the years immediately following its independence from Mexico in 1836. Stephen Austin's map of Texas and David Burr's map of Texas were two of the most important and influential maps of the Republic of Texas, and were widely used by settlers, explorers, and others interested in Texas.
