Herbert Bennion Harker (1925-2017) was a Candian born writer and illustrator. Throughout his life, Herbert worked as a draftsman for multiple oil companies around North America, and created city maps for cities in Southern California. He moved from Canada to California in 1963, and pursued his writing career. He published various novels, such as Goldenrod (1972), and various short stories, becoming a well-known Latter-day Saint author.
