Description:

Scarce Utica(!)-published map of New York state, issued by William Williams in 1830.

The map features a prominent profile of the newly-completed Erie Canal. It is hand-colored by county in the New York palette of the time (see Amos Lay's maps, for instance).

Williams published another edition in 1831, which added a profile of the Hudson River below that of the Erie Canal.

Detailed Condition:

Original hand-color. Engraving printed on banknote paper. Mounted in a contemporary or near-contemporary leather folder. Some minor wear to the edges and folds.
