periods in the history of the South, during a period when the region to the east of the River was controlled by Great Britain, while New Orleans and the region to the west were under the control of Spain. Much of the information used in Des Barres chart derives from Lt. John Ross' map of the river, based upon his expedition of 1765.

The map a tremendous amount of local information, especially along the eastern bank of the river. The map includes settlements, forts, creeks, cliffs and many property lots. The Village of Tonia Indians is located, along with the French Settlements of Point Conpee. Des Barres Atlantic Neptune is the most prolific of all 18th Century efforts to map the coastline of North America and a landmark in the history of American Cartography.

Detailed Condition:

A few reinforcement and restoration along the margins, including two areas with some minor restorations, and a repaired tear in the lower right corner. A nice example in original wash color.
