Description:

Nice and large 19th-century map of the state of Nebraska, published in Chicago and showing the state in great detail. Many cities, towns, and rivers are named on this detailed and precise map. Railroads are given particular attention and detail extends into the neighboring states of South Dakota, Iowa, Kansas, and Colorado

Several county layouts have changed since this map was published. For example, Cheyenne County has since been subdivided into Cheyenne and Morris counties.

The map lists the populations of major cities and towns in Nebraska to the left of the map. Railroads operating in the city are listed in the lower left of the map.
