Description:

Nice example Jansson's map of Yorkshire, published in Amsterdam at the end of the 17th-century.

The map centers on York and shows a large swath of northeastern England in fine detail.

The map includes extensive information, with cities, towns, roads, rivers, enclosures, forests, and much more all shown. The map includes two decorative cartouches, a number of sailing ships, and a sea monster. Cities shown on the map include York, Hull, Leeds, Halifax, Bradford, and Sheffield. To the west of the map are the imposing mountains of the Peak District and the Yorkshire Dales. Some hills are particularly overexaggerated in their stature, which further adds to the allure of the map.

The map draws its geographical sourcing from the John Speed map of the same region.
