Description:

This is an eye-catching and detailed map of the continent of Asia, originally published in 1864 by the American cartographer A. J. Johnson and his business partner, Benjamin Ward. The map features vibrant hand coloring by country, making it easy to distinguish between different regions and political entities.

In addition to its attractive coloring, the map offers a wealth of information about the geography of Asia, including the locations of major cities, lakes, rivers, and mountains. This information is presented in a clear and easy-to-read manner, making the map a valuable resource for researchers, educators, and anyone interested in the history and geography of the region.

The map is also distinguished by its ornamental border, which adds an extra layer of visual interest and makes it an appealing decorative object in its own right. Overall, the 1864 Johnson and Ward map of Asia is a valuable and aesthetically pleasing historical document that offers valuable insight into the geography and political organization of Asia in the mid-19th century.
