Description:

One of the earliest appearances of Wyoming on a map -- so early, it has not yet been added to the map title.

The map Pre-dates Yellowstone. Yellowstone Lake is also called Subletts Lake and is pushed far to the west of its actual location. The region between the Yellowstone River and the North Platte is largely unknown. Dakota and Wyoming have no counties. Idaho has only 5 counties. Montana has 9 counties.

Shows early explorers routes, forts, roads, towns, villages, Indians, etc as well as Gold Mines in Western Montana. The map also shows a number of proposed railroad routes and trading posts. Several other Gold regions, including one in Idaho are noted.

- 1865-66: Johnson & Ward Publisher. Only Missoula County named in Montana
- 1866-67: A.J. Johnson, publisher. Multiple Counties in Montana
- 1867: NW WY sticks out W but is now blunt at longitude 111.
