Description:

One of the earliest appearances of Wyoming on a map--so early, it has not yet been added to the map title. Pre-dates Yellowstone. Yellowstone Lake is also called Subletts Lake and is pushed far to the west of its actual location. The region between the Yellowstone River and the North Platte is largely unknown. Dakota & Wyoming have no counties. Idaho has only 5 counties. Montana has 9 counties. Shows early explorers routes, forts, roads, towns, villages, Indians etc. Gold Mines in Western Montana. also shows a number of proposed railroad routes, trading posts etc. Several other Gold regions, including one in Idaho. A rare configuration. An unusually nice example. Second state of the map, which follows the shortlived period when the map showed Wyoming extending to the Red Butte area, capturing a small part of Southwestern Wyoming.
